The Hatch Glowman Hot Spot Cooking Top with large and improved coal chute which opens into firebox. If all the local organizations would take a much interest in local hospital promotion as the Women's Institute we believe that would very soon be reality.

We have for you inspection, a very good assortment of the new pin-top light fixtures.

One Clevor and Al Miller have joined the patients list at the local hospital. Both are doing fine.

Flange Gill and Peterson have themselves such a risk that curl again while on commission.

The Person reports that there is a lot of interest in the "Better Light Better Sight" campaign.

You get twice the service for the price of a dunces house broom.

If your telephone needs new batteries, we have the grey label Columbia used by the Albert government telephone.

The McDug. Bess school has been postponed indefinitely. This is a real worth while, and we feel that we want to hold it when everyone can attend. Watch for dates.

We have what it takes to convert your old single light to a new type indirect model.

This change over is very reasonable too, we also have the small parchment clip on shades recommended.

It seems like old days again when all traffic is by team and train.

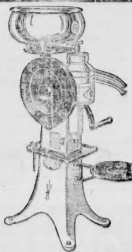

Let's hope that 1937 will continue to remind us of old times, particularly 1935.

If we can be of any assistance to you, such as gathering up your groceries, mail etc. to be sent out by some neighbor, don't forget to phone number six and let us know, and should we want to be "Yule Hardware Merchants."

Centennial Day

The John Deere Centennial show was a decided success. Although the roads were poor there were approximately 225 present. The main feature was "The Blacksmith's Gift" with an all-Hollywood Production starring Monte Blue as John Deere, which proved educational as well as entertaining.

J. Gittel is a Calgary visitor this week.

Bert Gill was unfortunate in freezing his right foot last week and in consequence has been confined some severe suffering. The foot was injured during the war and due to the fact that there is no circulation it freezes quite quickly. Mr. Gill is able to be around but is still having considerable trouble.

Annual Meeting Consolidated S. D.

The annual meeting of the ratepayers of the Champion Consolidated School District was held on Saturday afternoon, February 6th, in the High School. There was a very good attendance. Mrs. G. Volsey acted as chairman for the meeting. Minutes of the 1936 annual meeting were read and adopted. Nominations for trustees were called for, which resulted in C. McLean being elected, for a term of two years, by acclamation. Mr. McLean has acted as chairman for the past two years and his services have met with distinct approval. The operation of rural school vans was discussed. A motion was carried in which the board have been authorized to request the Department of Education to have the Champion Public School inspected each year without fail, in order that Inspector's reports may be presented at every annual meeting. The financial position of the school district was found to be in excellent shape with approximately $3500 cash on hand in bank. Mrs. Baubler moved a vote of thanks to the Board of Trustees and teachers for their splendid work of the past year.

February 12th.

The new 1937 printed programmes were distributed at this meeting. One new member joined.

A sumptuous lunch was provided by the hostess who was assisted in serving by Mrs. J. T. Stephenson and Miss V. Taylor. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. R. L. Baker on March 9th.

Wednesday, February 17th - Show at $8.00

The Gangbuster program, on Wednesday evening, has proved exceptionally popular this winter among radio listeners. Its time on the air coincided with the picture show on Wednesday and in consequence the management have changed the time to one half hour later, in order that theatre fans and also Gangbuster listeners would not be forced to deprive themselves of either entertainment.

Wonder What Was at Stake?

The ending risk was the scene of a Battle Royal on Wednesday afternoon when a risk from the country, composed of Peter Holm, ski; Del. Cool, 3rd; Theodore Holm, 2nd; Franklin Cool, lead, played a risk from town composed of H. E. Gill, ski; Bob Gardner, 3rd; Geo. Campbell, 2nd; Ole Running, lead. When the smoke of battle rolled away, the score which was kept by an official score keeper in the person of M. F. Hamilton, read 53 in favor of the town risk, A. W. Jopling, who was official referee, was called on to settle a dispute at the end, which he did in his usual capable manner.

Supermen are predicted for a hundred years from now. And they will probably find plenty of super problems.

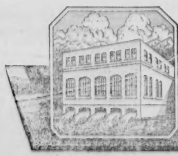

If at present you are a user of Electricity you know that you could not afford to be without it. But, if you use it only sparingly, you are not taking full advantage of the services which are available.

Even at the basic rate Electricity is cheap; but once enough energy has been used to satisfy your minimum requirements a FEW ADDITIONAL CENTS will bring you MANY ADDITIONAL HOURS of convenience in the use of an Electric Washer, Vacuum Cleaner or Refrigerator, and of comfort and enjoyment in the use of a good Reading Lamp or the operation of your Radio.

Where can you obtain greater value for so small an added cost as in the full use of your Electric Appliances? What small investment in your home will return you greater, or even equal dividends in comfort and leisure?

The more Electricity you use, the less it costs.

Our local representative will be glad to show you why.

— A NOVEL BY —

That was the only thing she had not told Michael—about Tut-Amun-Ra's curse. She could not bring herself to that, thinking of what terror there would be in his eyes. She had told him much about herself, though, of her parentage, and mentioned that her father was an archaeologist who had taken her to Egypt with him, but that he was dead now, and she was alone.

Michael was astonished and pleased. "Elliott," he mused. "The Professor Brown Elliott? Why, he was famous, wasn't he?" He laughed and said, "Yes. 'Wonder what Stephanie and the rest of them who are living on the glory of ancestors who accomplished things in the dim past would think if they knew you were his daughter!'"

In a way she explained how she had come to be in the La Lana that night, told of her loneliness and her yearning to see a little of life, the bright lights, Michael said.

"What an idiot of a bouncer I was! I should have seen it the minute I clapped eyes on you. . . . Perhaps I did, but in my stubbornness refused to see! Thank heaven all that's forgotten. Starr—I'll send the rest of my life making up to you, if I can."

But nothing about the curse of Tut-Amun-Ra. Nothing of the six months of life that had been given her!

Safe in the arms of a flesh and blood lover it was difficult to realize that she also had loved a man who was to be dominated by a three-thousand-year-old curse. This was Twentieth Century America, and she would laugh off the curse of Tut-Amun-Ra as mere foolishness before a forgotten age.

Then, she remembered, a million people had not seen her father and John Lessing die. They had not seen a stranger, a priest, a man, whom her lover would protect even in death, crumble into dust.

Feverishly Starr reasoned with herself, trying to ascribe the deaths of the two men to natural causes. Neither of them were young—it had been a strenuous life. And she, a woman, whom her lover would protect even in death, crumble into dust.

"I don't want to go back. Our lives here is so perfect, Michael. It won't be the same."

Michael said, with that cheerful, careless laugh of his:

"Of course it will be. I'll still throw you a kiss now and then."

All the time his eyes were laughing at her. He did not understand, of course.

Driving back to New York, they discussed their living arrangements. Starr was only detached, as though she had little interest in the matter, but Michael was enthusiastic about their own home-to-be. He finally decided that the Egyptian furnishings, for the time being, but their real home was to be of the most modern.

"I imagine you'll be more comfortable among your own Lares and Penates, Starr darling," he insisted. "than in my own entirely meagre bachelor domain. But we won't stay there. We'll come out of Egypt as we came in. No makeshift windows for us! We're going to have the kind we can throw open wide and look out on—on—"

He thought them. "By Jove, I never thought of it before, but I wonder if windows like that wouldn't be just the thing to keep babies from falling out."

Starr forced herself to smile up at him. "They use them in Egypt," he reminded. "to keep wives in. You'll need them for me, Michael-Hassan."

Sapphira was overwhelmingly glad to see both of them, and flattered over them like a comfortably rested hen who had just found her lost chickens.

"Laway me, Miss Starr!" she exclaimed. "How good you do look! Want I tell you what you want, Starr? Was it get married and stop all your foolishness?"

Starr laughed back at her, but it was happily. "I imagine before we're very long, Sapphira, that we're going to discover there are a good many who still consider I'm committed the height of my foolishness."

"We don't care, do we?" Michael asked, and Starr laid into him.

"Why should we, darling?" He asked.

Among the first things Starr did when she was settled in the city was to send the diamond and the opal bracelet back to Lane Marlowe by an armed messenger.

Only the terrific monetary value of the things had prevented her from sending it back through the mails before. But in the country it had been carefully hidden, kept out of sight. She enclosed no note with the bauble when she returned it.

Weeks later she met him at an informal gathering, and he mentioned the incident of the bracelet, implying that he had been hurt by it.

"Oh, you'll find someone else who will wear it much better than I ever could," she told him.

Lance said quietly: "My tastes must have changed Starr, or maybe I'm getting old. I haven't been able to find anyone else yet—or wanted."

But Lance Marlowe had not changed. He had merely changed his circle of acquaintance. He never would change. She flushed deeply as he added in a whisper: "My yacht is being renovated. It may not be the proper size for it, but I'm sailing soon for Hawaii, alone."

He looked at her and she saw in his mind she was still "Play-Girl." He could not reconcile any idea of "Play-Girl" being faithful, even though married. "I had hoped—"

Not A New Science

Plastic Surgery Has Developed Gradually From Early

Background

The plastic surgeon's job is for the most part a grim business. People injured in accidents, by burns, and damage caused by removal of growths form the bulk of the specialist's patients.

On the surface, plastic surgery might seem to be the newest of medical techniques, but it is not, according to Dr. Patton Hixon, one of Toronto's best known specialists.

During the war Dr. Hixon worked side by side with Dr. Harold Gillie, noted English plastic surgeon, whose recent operation to restore the features of a girl horribly burned was described as a "miracle."

"During the war we thought we had got hold of something new," said Dr. Hixon, "but later when we had time to go into the matter we found that there was an early background. The science had developed gradually."

But the very old for plastic surgery what it did for many early inventions, like the acropine. It lent an urgency to the revived development, and brought results never before obtained. Surrounded by men mutilated by shot and shell, doctors simply had to "do something."

As a result, hundreds of men now are able to lead a normal life.

It was several years after the war that a Dutch scientist, Dr. Esser, made the greatest single improvement in plastic surgery. "Skin grafts had a tendency to 'float up' because of accumulated blood and serum under the new skin," Dr. Esser said, "and then they would fall off."

Dr. Esser found that by using the pressure on the grafted area, resulting in the new skin growing to match the surrounding skin." Toronto Star Weekly.

New Set-Up For India

First Session Government In Charge

Thirty million electors of whom more than 5,000,000 are women—will shortly vote in British India on the basis of universal franchise.

It's a form of responsible government rigorously bound about by limiting safeguards, but it's a beginning.

It's the beginning of the great scheme to create a United States of India.

The Government of India Act of 1935 contemplated creation of a federal union of British India and the provinces of British India, states not subject to British territory, who subjects are not British, yet living across main arteries of communication, vital to the welfare of India.

The section of the act granting autonomous government to the provinces of British India does not seem to wait for the wider federal scheme. It comes into force April 1. Under it, legislative assemblies will be elected locally, and the provinces will be grouped into five or six provinces, Bihar and Assam.

The continued cold weather has effected the egg production in the district very severely and this week it was impossible to obtain fresh eggs in town. Daily butter has been at a premium all winter due to the feed shortage.

On Tuesday night of last week the office of the National Grain Co. was entered by some unknown persons and four cash grain tickets were stolen. The thief gained entrance by cutting the lock on the door. Police are investigating.

Some farmers do finally emerge from their hide-outs.

The World of Wheat

H. G. L. Strange,
Director, Research Department,
Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

Duties set up against Canadian wheat by foreign countries are coming down. France, Germany, Italy, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Norway and Sweden, all recently have either actually reduced tariffs against Canadian and other export wheats, or are considering doing so.

This is most welcome news, but it is exactly what could be expected at this time, and which actually was forecast several years ago by some persons.

History reveals that the economic events which happen after a great war always occur in about the same sequence. After the boom—the natural consequence of a great war—inevitably comes a depression. During the depression countries try to produce and manufacture, at home, goods and commodities which hitherto they had imported from their neighbors.

This policy of "Nationalism" or "Self-Sufficiency" continues for a few years, then the realization sharply comes that as imports are curtailed, so exports going out of any country are correspondingly reduced. As soon as this is recognized, economic reality returns, and countries begin to reduce their tariffs.

Next will come the tearing down of other restrictions against international trade and commerce, such as quotas, trade agreements, depreciation of money and so forth.

Meanwhile Canada will sell her wheat more easily.

Card of Thanks

The Jopling and Chapp ranks are leading in the square dance being held at the local rink. All games have been very closely contested. At the conclusion of this dance, due to the Little B. W. Hospital being postponed, a President vs. Vice-President dance will take place. Plans were under way to hold a local hospital at the completion of the above dance but road conditions at present are not favorable.

A singular development of the past year has been the nation-wide organization of groups and associations of one form and another with the objective of some common purpose. People are now realizing more than ever before that individual protests are ineffective, individual action limited in scope and that the only possible protection is in organization and united action.

Taxpayers particularly are active in this direction because legislative trends are toward higher taxes, more government regulation, constant interference with, and penalization of, business. Too frequently it is overlooked by those who promote, as well as by those who enact the laws, Courts have held that tax is not made invalid because it destroys a business. Taxation, it is claimed, is a business risk. Industry and its customers are obviously becoming alarmed that their own representatives in government cannot do not, look after their interests—they must do it themselves.
